BLAUVELT-KRONOLD CONCERT.

The tickets for the Blauvelt-Kronold Concert went on sale, Tuesday evening, at Stone's Drug Store. A goodly number secured seats, which shows that this concert has touched a popular chord. There are however plenty of desirable seats left, so no one need miss this musical treat on this account. It is not often that Norway has a world famous singer visit her, and every one who possibly can should attend. At the price of admission (75 cents) Norway Opera House ought to be crowded. F. P. Stone furnished tickets when ordered by mail, so all living at a distance, who wish to attend, can secure their seats in advance.

William R. Chapman, director in chief of the Maine Musical Festival and Maine Symphony Orchestra will be present and will sing a sufficient guarantee that this concert will be all it is advertised to be. Hans Kronold, the wonderful violinist, whose remarkable playing was the sensation of the Maine Musical Festival, will play. All could not attend the great Maine Musical Festival but some of the best taking part in it will be brought to our very doors, Thursday evening, Jan. 6.

Mme. Blauvelt is a marvellous soprano and her singing created the greatest enthusiasm at Bangor and Portland. She has no superior as a concert singer, being endowed with charming personality and a matchless voice.

Rev. Marcus H. Carroll, the musical director of the Norway and South Paris Festival Chorus, hands us this notice to last year's chorus members:

"Wm. Chapman has signified his wish to have the chorus sing the following numbers at the concert on January 6:— "Evening," "Only Thou," "Inflammation," "Madame Blauvelt," "Soldiers," "Chorus," "Gloria," "Departure." Five of these numbers belong to the music sung at the Festival, last October. Members of last year's chorus are cordially invited to come to the rehearsal, which will be held at the usual place, on Saturday evening, January 1st, and to take part in the concert with this year's chorus. It is hoped that all who can will come and help to make the singing of the chorus at this concert a complete success."

The magnificent concert, which is to be given under Mr. Chapman's direction on January 6, at the Norway Opera House, is something entirely unique and unprecedented in the annals of music in Oxford County. Madame Blauvelt holds the highest rank among American sopranos. Her wonderful voice combines in a very marked degree all the qualities which go to make up a true artist. An organ of immense power and range, and the greatest sweetness and sonority; a faultless technique, giving her absolute command over every form of expression. Herr Hans Kronold holds in his own particular sphere a position fully as high as that of Madame Blauvelt. The rich, luscious quality of his tones which he can draw forth from his instrument impresses one only less than his command over every branch of virtuosity.

This concert certainly affords an opportunity which no lover of music in this vicinity can afford to miss, and numbers of visitors from the surrounding towns, West Paris, Bethel, Mechanic Falls, Hebron, etc., will, we understand, come to Norway for the concert.

Norway people will, we have no doubt, uphold the reputation as a music-loving community which they so deservedly possess in the State of Maine.

Secure your seats at once before all the best locations have been sold.

High School Temporarily Closed.

Owing to an accident on the boiler, which furnishes steam for the High school building, the schools for the week were temporarily closed. It seems that the janitor lost the water in the boiler and with a heavy fire under it burnt the boiler so badly as to probably ruin it. At any rate the boiler, Monday morning, would not hold water and it was decided to buy another one. It will take some three or four weeks before the new boiler will be in running order. During that time the schools in that building will probably be closed as it will be pretty difficult to make arrangements for temporarily heating the building.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year by Norway Lodge, No. 16 I. O. O. F., on Tuesday evening, Dec. 28:

Agent, H. A. Rich.

The employees in the Stitching room at the shoe factory gave their foreman, Alonzo M. Varney, a couple of nice Christmas presents. The Baptist Sunday school had a nice Christmas tree, and some pretty evening services, Friday evening. There was speaking by Mildred Bangs, Helen Bangs, Maggie Snow, Willie Snow, Harriet Millett, singing by Maud Anderson, Gertrude Hayes, Maud Sylvester, Nora Snow, Maud A. and Belle DeCosta, and a group of children; and remarks by superintendent Nathan W. Millett.

The New Year's Ball by the Norway Wheel Club to-night (Friday) is being anticipated as one of the most enjoyable of the season. There will be a concert by Stearns & Norworthy's Orchestra before the march and circle. This will be followed by a finely arranged order of fourteen dances. At the mission ice cream and cake will be served. No pains are being spared by the wheel club to make this a pleasant event—to dance out the old year and welcome in the new. The Norway Wheel Club comprises a goodly number of the younger people of our village.

The Christmas play, "Santa Claus," at the Congregational vestry, last Friday evening, had a merry crew and some joyful passengers who gave a nice musical and literary exercise for the pleasure of the people that waited the coming of the ship had a goodly cargo of presents.

The Baptist church was crowded, last Friday evening. A large chorus of children recited the psalm, "Our Old Friend, Santa Claus," with a vim that was enjoyable indeed. Santa Claus himself appeared to New York to New York, and distributed a great number of presents, nearly everybody getting some token of good will. It was one of the best Christmas entertainments ever given in the church. Much credit is due to Mrs. W. B. Edw. for her work in training the little folks, and to the rest of the committee for work done.

Mrs. Maria L. wife of C. N. Porter, died at her home, last Thursday afternoon. She had been ill for a long time, and the end had been expected for some time. She was the first to die of the five children of the late Nathan and Mary (Sampson) Millett of Norway, the surviving brothers and sisters being Mrs. Benjamin Bird of this town, Dea. Nathan W. Millett of Norway, Mrs. Frank Porter and Julia E. Millett who live here. She was 67 years old and had been married 45 years. Her husband and a large family of children survive. The funeral was held at the residence, Saturday afternoon, attended by Rev. E. J. Haughton, pastor of the Congregational church, of which Mrs. Porter had long been a member.

Funeral of Dr. Rounds.

The Congregational church was packed to the doors, Monday afternoon, with people anxious to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of a man who had been so prominent a factor in the life of the community. Scripture reading was by Rev. R. J. Haughton, pastor of the Cong. church, and prayer was offered by Rev. T. J. Ramsdell of the Baptist church. Mr. Haughton gave a short address, speaking of the civic and moral virtues of the deceased, of his bluff and rugged honesty, and love for his fellow-men. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. I. A. Bean of the Methodist church.

Kimball Post, G. A. R., of which the deceased was a Past Commander, performed the funeral services of their order. Many visiting comrades were in the ranks of the Post. Mr. Mica Lodge and a number of comrades of Old Fellows were present with large delegations. The body was deposited in the tomb at Riverside cemetery.

The floral tributes were beautiful indeed. There were:

The specimen came from a large pocket opened not long since at "Mount Amber Quartz," Auburn, and is the property of Loren B. Merrill of Paris Hill, who bought the entire contents of the pocket. This is a piece of the lining of the pocket, and is strictly white quartz, plated with smoky.

It is understood that Prof. Nathan C. Grover of Maine University will spend the vacation in a visit to his friends in Redlands, California. His brother, Sumner A. Grover, so pleasantly situated at that place, was married the 18th of December. His many friends in the East wish him a happy life in his new relationship.

The festivals on Christmas eve, by the three churches in the place, were up to date in interest with any previously held. The trees were large and well loaded with fruit. Many of the older class were liberally remembered, but these annual festivals are becoming more and more marked, as in interest of children. At the Universalist festival, Santa gave them a surprise. He came tugging in his big basket of presents as usual and distributed them to his little ones in his joyful familiar style, but on getting down to the bottom of his bountiful basket he pulled out a chubby faced boy of five years old and stood him upon the platform facing a startled audience, which he immediately hushed to silence with a significant wave of the hand, when the little fellow, in fine style, delivered a recital appropriate to the occasion. Santa then took him in his arms, called the name, "Willie 'Kendall,'" and delivered the presents.

Ed. Woodward has removed from Lancaster, N. H., to Bethel, and is occupying the Hapgood rent on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Flint have returned from Waterville, where they went to reside after their recent marriage. Mr. Flint is now assisting M. Penley in his meat and provision store.

The people of West Bethel are trying to find an understanding of the pastor to preach in their new church. Thus far they have been unable to find one. The church was built with the understanding that it should not be called a denominational church and no denomination should be preached there. If anyone should know of a good christian preacher utterly without denominational preferences, the West Bethel people would like to know about it. It would be funny wouldn't it if this should be a first step toward the building of a church in their new church. Thus far they have been unable to find one. ### A New Year's Wish.

"Happy New Year!" shout the children, "Grandma, this is New Year's Day. Don't you know we come to greet you every year in just this way?"
"Yes," said grandma, as if waking from a dream her eyes in tears, "Yes, my darling, I was dreaming of the days in other years."
"For I live, not in the new years, But in old years that are gone, As at even we remember All the bright and happy morn."
"May your New Year ring with gladness, All your days be free from worry, So that naught may live in memory That shall sadden life's sweet song."
"Then when shadows veil the future, You can dwell within the past And its flowers and birds and sunshine Will be yours unto the last."
ALMA FENDEXTER HAYDEN.

Rest for You.

"In the Christian's home in glory There remains a land of rest, Care free was the little sister, Not a pain within her breast. Softly sang she of the resting For which she no longer knew, 'In the Christian's home in glory, There is rest for you.'"
"In the Christian's home in glory, Lightly on the sunset story Of a world so free from care, Now it was a maiden's stage, And she pondered o'er and o'er, 'Life so much of joy is bringing, Can there be a happier shore?'"
"In the Christian's home in glory There remains a land of rest, Life had told its long sad story, Low the sun sank in the west, Silver hair and sweet voice quivering Now the journey almost through, Still she sang with faith unwavering 'There is rest for you.'"
"In the Christian's home in glory, Tenderly the words were sung, When her lips were cold and silent, And our hearts with grief were wrung For her feet so slow and faltering, Had outstripped us in the race, In the Christian's home in glory She had found her resting place. Still our feet are journeying onward To that land so pure and blest, Where the dear ones will be waiting, Those whom we have loved the best, And methinks I hear their greeting, 'Welcome to the joy of Heaven! There is rest for you.'"

Aunt Jenima's Observations.
Ordering a dinner is an art in which few excel. An unhappy home is often the result of too much self-assertion by various members of the family.
A broom will not sweep alone; it takes brains even to pick up dust and do it properly.
To compare your wife's bread to a gate weight is poor judgment. It may be that she has her share of that indefinable thing called sensibleness.
To be called a gossip is not an honor—if it be true. There are times when to be tongue-tied is a blessing.
A sympathetic heart is not one that is continually prying into its neighbors' business. It takes more than curiosity to give us fellow feeling.
There are dark days in every home but they simply serve to bring out the bright in stronger relief.
A small income is not necessarily a curse; it may serve to keep you busy planning how to make both ends meet and thus give you wisdom.
Home influences make men and women what they are. Mothers should be character builders—fathers models for future men.
The memory of a good mother is a wonderful talisman.
Sciatie Rheumatism.
"My husband suffered for two years with sciatie rheumatism. It appeared in his back and hip. I got him a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and before he had finished taking it he was relieved of the pain. When he had taken three bottles he was cured."
Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Easy, yet efficient.
"Edwin Booth as a Husband."
At this period the second Mrs. Booth, always a nervous invalid, began to show signs of the mental lack of balance which finally sapped her own life and almost broke his heart. During her frequent attacks at Saratoga and later, when the two families met in New York and in London, sometimes she was very trying, but I never knew him to show a sign or utter a word of impatience. He bore meekly with everything she said and made excuses for her, concealed her irritability and irresponsibility as much as possible; he held her in his arms, as if she were a baby, for hours and nights together without a murmur and he showed a devotion that hardly can be equalled. [From "A Group of Players," by Laurence Hutton, in Harper's Magazine for January.]
The following is a truth that is hard to disguise:
"We have spent money enough in the last twenty-five years to make the best of streets, but we have not a square mile of good road in the place. Road-making is a profession, an art, like chemistry or singing, and not to be mastered by every ward politician in a summer. We need a competent road engineer."

Wanted:—A Live Church.
Out in the world, The great green world, The selfish world with its people, There are spots all bare, There is room to spare For another church and steeple, For a church as broad As the love of God, For a church for the weary sinner, With an open door For the famished poor, For the loser, as well as winner. It could stand awhile Without pomp or style, These Mammon should rear no altar, But should stand aside With his worldly pride, While across its portals falter The weary rest, From the cold, hard street, Of the outcast and the alien, The hordes of sin Should be welcomed in And cared for within its palings. There its priests should stand With an outstretched hand To each fallen man and brother, And each sister sore, Could its shelter seek Like the arms of a loving mother. Then the gods of sin Would grow lean and thin, And empty would be their coffers, When the weak ones come, They'll be helped to spurn The wages that sin still offers. There are none so weak They would not seek The raiment of righteous living, If the cold hard glare, Like a piercing lance, Did not tell them the unforgiving Is this righteous world With its old idols carved In grim satanic sneering, While it draws them in, In virtuous pride, Contumacious bearing, And supports its jails With many walls, Its asylums and its prisons Its paupers' pens, And other dens, As risen But when a church has risen To cleanse the stains, With toil and pains, The human kind is turning By acts that prove The Father's love, Is not mere idle preaching, And while time rolls Lit human souls With honest kind endeavor, Teach self respect, They'll stand erect, And leave their sins forever. Boston, Mass. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

OTISFIELD.
W. W. Andrews says: I am not in the poultry business, but it is not because I have no faith in it. This country ought to be able to produce its own eggs without depending on countries. So long as the human family have a liking for poultry and eggs, somebody may get good pay for producing them, but the man who gets the best pay will be the live man, who exercises care and diligence in regard to every particular pertaining to the business. For the first time in my life I am feeding to my pigs and calves a few mangel-wurzels. I wish I had planted four times as many. I planted twelve rows, ten bushels, long, which was quickly done with my corn planter. The ground not being naturally weedy it was but little more work to care for them than to care for so many potatoes. An unfavorable season gave me only sixty-five bushels, but with no apples to feed it is pleasing to have a little of something to feed, that does not call for cash. I know of nothing else that I could have planted on the same ground, that, together with a little milk, would make so many "square meals."

Wanted:—A Live Church.

Out in the world, The great green world, The selfish world with its people, There are spots all bare, There is room to spare For another church and steeple, For a church as broad As the love of God, For a church for the weary sinner, With an open door For the famished poor, For the loser, as well as winner. It could stand awhile Without pomp or style, These Mammon should rear no altar, But should stand aside With his worldly pride, While across its portals falter The weary rest, From the cold, hard street, Of the outcast and the alien, The hordes of sin Should be welcomed in And cared for within its palings. There its priests should stand With an outstretched hand To each fallen man and brother, And each sister sore, Could its shelter seek Like the arms of a loving mother. Then the gods of sin Would grow lean and thin, And empty would be their coffers, When the weak ones come, They'll be helped to spurn The wages that sin still offers. There are none so weak They would not seek The raiment of righteous living, If the cold hard glare, Like a piercing lance, Did not tell them the unforgiving Is this righteous world With its old idols carved In grim satanic sneering, While it draws them in, In virtuous pride, Contumacious bearing, And supports its jails With many walls, Its asylums and its prisons Its paupers' pens, And other dens, As risen But when a church has risen To cleanse the stains, With toil and pains, The human kind is turning By acts that prove The Father's love, Is not mere idle preaching, And while time rolls Lit human souls With honest kind endeavor, Teach self respect, They'll stand erect, And leave their sins forever. W. W. Andrews says: I am not in the poultry business, but it is not because I have no faith in it. This country ought to be able to produce its own eggs without depending on countries. So long as the human family have a liking for poultry and eggs, somebody may get good pay for producing them, but the man who gets the best pay will be the live man, who exercises care and diligence in regard to every particular pertaining to the business. For the first time in my life I am feeding to my pigs and calves a few mangel-wurzels. I wish I had planted four times as many. I planted twelve rows, ten bushels, long, which was quickly done with my corn planter. The ground not being naturally weedy it was but little more work to care for them than to care for so many potatoes. An unfavorable season gave me only sixty-five bushels, but with no apples to feed it is pleasing to have a little of something to feed, that does not call for cash. I know of nothing else that I could have planted on the same ground, that, together with a little milk, would make so many "square meals."

Crystal Wedding.

Your Buckfield correspondent having been invited to participate in the exercises of a crystal wedding, in the city of Auburn, withal to invoke the muses, now shows himself acting in the capacity of reporter as well.

The parties were Geo. W. Merrill and Annie L. (Pulsifer) Merrill, married at South Paris, Dec. 25, 1883.

Mr. Merrill was a Paris boy, where his brothers, Lyman S., Loren B. and Chas. H. now reside. A sister, Mrs. Luther Maxim, resides at West Sumner.

Chas. H., a twin brother, with the same care and grooming, would readily be recognized by an acquaintance of George.

Mrs. Merrill was a daughter of the late Moses Pulsifer, the mother, Mrs. Nancy Pulsifer, now residing with this daughter, Mrs. Merrill. Mr. M. has a brother, Wm. C. Pulsifer, member of the D. C. Heath Publishing Co. of Boston, New York and Chicago. Her sisters are Mrs. Dr. H. W. Field and Mrs. Ardon F. Filton of Auburn.

Frank Rackoff, as master of ceremonies with well chosen words presented the presents, Mr. Merrill responding, thanked the company for their kind consideration, after which a poem entitled, Christmas Carols, composed for the occasion, was read by your correspondent.

Nathaniel Field, entertained the company with a photograph after which Stevens, the caterer, furnished a very elaborate layout, consisting of ice cream confectionery, etc.

It appeared to us that the guests were enjoying themselves socially and otherwise, and as the clock tolled eleven, the people doubtless admonishing that the Sabbath was near, commenced to depart. As a near neighbor was about to depart, the host observing, he was minus an overcoat, remarked, "You'd you be cold?"

"Oh no, I have on my bosom pin."

A tonal gem from Mr. Mica in gold setting was presented to Mrs. Merrill by her husband.

Christmas Carols.

Over the rivers the message flew, Christmas carols we'll renew, Christmas greetings thick and fast, cluster round our mantles past.

George and Annie—Yes, you know married fifteen years ago, now invite you to their home; George and Annie bid you come.

Fifteen years of wedded life, since you joined in wedlock's strife, fifteen years—and oh, how short since the day you ceased to court.

Christmas greetings, friendship true, crystal offerings now are due, from your friends and kindred here, Christmas carols, Christmas cheer.

What will now the muses bring? What can these old voices sing? Since all sentiment has flown? Since all sentiment has flown?

You seem happy and content, "Nash this grand old ornament, with your birds of promise past, with commandments you'll comply to increase and multiply."

In taking stock of past accounts, of wedded bliss in fair amounts, in the summing up of debt and subtracting from the credit, proves the balance in the favor of continued life's endeavor.

Do do troubles moods and care call for changes here and there? Would you seek the sage's advice in the summing up, he would say, "Live your pleasures now, to-day."

More, the sage would here impart, knowledge gained by subtlety; beware of partners in your deal, lest the margins they may steal.

And now may peace and joy define the crystal brightness of your time, with silver clouds and golden bond, congenial hearts will here respond.

GILBERT TILTON.

Dr. Isaac Rounds.

Isaac Rounds was born in that part of Auburn formerly Danville, Sept. 11, 1842. When the war of rebellion broke out, he enlisted, became a private in Company D of the 17th Maine and was mustered into service on the 18th day of August, 1862. He served through the war, and was twice wounded, once at the battle of the Wilderness, May 6, 1864, when his skull was fractured, and April 6, 1865, at Petersburg, when in pursuit of Lee's army, that being a flesh wound of the leg. He afterward drew a pension for the injuries received while fighting for his country. Returning to peaceful pursuits, he studied medicine, graduated at the Maine Medical School in 1878. He commenced practice at Lewiston, but came to South Paris before the close of the year. He was successful in his profession, built up a large practice, and became one of the leading citizens of the place.

He took an active interest in the welfare of the community, but was more especially a worker in the cause of temperance. That was a subject which lay next to his heart, and his individual efforts in that direction have left a marked impress on the community.

Politically he was an ardent Republican, and was prominent in the councils of his party. Last year, he was elected Representative to the Legislature. He was chairman of the temperance committee, and had the framing of the noted cigarette bill. He came into special notice, however, when by leading the old soldier members in a successful fight against the scheme for a soldiers' home at Camp Benson, which would probably have cost the State a million dollars.

He was the first president officer of Mt. Mica Lodge of Odd Fellows, and his ability was found valuable to that fraternity on many occasions.

He married Lydia A. Haskell, who survives. They had two children; Susie L. is recognized as one of the brightest students in Bates College; Frank W. is a sturdy lad of fifteen years.

Dr. Rounds had been in feeble health for half a year, and the last few weeks was confined to the house. He passed away on Friday morning, Dec. 24th.

WATERFORD.

The high school in this place is progressing finely, we understand. We are pleased to hear this. We believe if there is one thing Waterford needs more than another, it is one term, at least, of high school every year. It gives our scholars a chance to get a good education at home, with much less expense and inconvenience generally, than there would be by going away to school. A high school has been a long felt want and once gotten we should know how to appreciate it. Let us keep it by all means.

Albert Greenleaf Berry of Bridgton died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sumner Foster, Dec. 17, aged 89 years. Mr. Berry was born in Denmark, and was the son of Isaac and Phoebe Berry. In 1867 he bought the planing and saw mills at Sandy Creek, and did a large lumber business. Old age compelled him to give up the business management to his son. Three of his five children survive him.

To make "The Ladies' Home Journal" for 1898 "the best of all the years; the most cheerful and helpful magazine that a woman can possibly have in her home," is the purpose of its editors, as disclosed by a prospectus outlining a few of the projected features for the coming year. While the Journal will be more useful and practical than ever before, it is made apparent that its literary features will be strengthened, and that pictorially it will be more attractive and artistically than ever. ### HOMESICK HIPPOPOTAMUS.

It Longed For the Language of Its Babyhood Home.
During Bayard Taylor's visit to the zoological gardens in London he noticed a hippopotamus which lay in its tank apparently oblivious of its surroundings. Entering into conversation with the keeper one morning, he was told that the creature refused to eat and was gradually starving itself to death. "It fancy it's homesick," added the keeper. "He's a fine specimen, and it seems a pity we should lose him, but he's moped ever since the keeper who had charge of him on board the steamer left. He pays no attention to anything I say."

Learning that the creature came from a part of Africa he had once visited, Mr. Taylor, on an impulse, leaned forward and addressed it in the dialect used by the hunters and keepers of that region. The animal lifted its head, and the small eyes opened. Mr. Taylor repeated his remarks, and what does Mr. Hippo do but paddle slowly over to where he stood. Crossing to the other side of the tank, the experiment was repeated with the same result, the poor thing showing unmistakable signs of joy, even consenting to receive food from the hand of his new friend.

Mr. Taylor paid several visits to the gardens, being always noticed by his African friend. Finally, before leaving the city, he taught the keeper a few sentences he had been in the habit of addressing to the hippopotamus and went his way.

Two years later he was in London, and, curious to know the result, again paid his respects to his amphibious friend. To his surprise the creature recognized his voice at once, and expressed his joy by paddling from side to side of his tank after his visitor.

Bayard Taylor says that it convinced him that even a hippopotamus may have affections, and tenacious ones at that, as well as a good memory.

GOOD ROADS IDEA.

A Proposition In New Jersey to Teach Roadbuilding In the Schools.

A novel feature of the good roads movement in New Jersey is the proposition to introduce instruction on road building into the common schools. The need of elementary instruction in that direction is seen every day. The state report says:

"The ignorance that prevails among the average rural residents regarding the proper manner of repairing even the common roads shows a striking necessity for some kind of technical instruction, guided by which our ordinary township authorities will be able to make the best use of the ever present materials for keeping the roads in proper repair."

"In traveling over the country we often see men repairing a miry roadway by throwing mud from the ditches into the middle of the roadbed. In all our communities it is a common practice to scrape the worn out material, that has been repeatedly washed from the center of the road, back into the middle of the road, only to be again washed out by the rain or to be washed through as deep sand."

"Upon our macadam highways there is a prevailing spirit of neglect. Instead of immediately repairing the little breaks, our county officials leave them until rods of the stone become unraveled, necessitating at times the expenditure of several hundred dollars per mile for repairs, where a few dollars would have been sufficient."

Roll the Roads.

Experience has shown that the way to preserve stone roads is to roll them after rains with a steam roller, or where that is undesirable with a heavy horse roller. The steam rollers can be bought for about $3,000, and the expense, if each township owned and operated its own roller, would be slight. Weak bridges are sometimes an obstacle, but it is certain that, without rolling at the proper time, the best stone road is bound to be destroyed by the sun, wind and wear and tear.

The Enemy Is Ours!

The grippe usually leaves the sufferer in a very feeble condition, with a persistent cough and other premonitory symptoms of pulmonary affection. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup promptly administered at the beginning of an attack of grippe, will forestall that dangerous enemy to life—consumption. Mrs. Maggie Tulga, Ironton, Ohio, says: "It affords me much pleasure to bear testimony to the merits of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. I had been a sufferer from the grippe for a week, I tried a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and after taking it, was completely cured of the dreadful cough and disease. I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is sold everywhere for 25 cents.

You have all heard the story about the man who tried to spit on the fly which was biting his nose.

Our position with some of the jewelers is like unto the fly. "They may fret and fume," "Sweat and swear," cry "Cheap premium silverware," "Look out for bogus goods," "I'm the only wild and woolly man east of the rocky mountains."

Their bluster cuts no ice with us. We still continue to give out silverware as premiums.

Last week we gave away as premiums nearly fifty dollars worth of silverware; not the CHEAP kind which our esteemed friend, the jeweler, refers to. Every piece was guaranteed to be plated with pure silver on a base of extra hard white metal and with ordinary wear will last from fifteen to twenty years.

Mr. Barnes was sitting in his room, with nothing of special importance to occupy his thoughts, when he announced a visitor.

"What name?" asked Mr. Barnes.
"None," was the reply.
"You mean," said the stranger, "that the man did not give name. He must have one, or show him in."

A minute later the stranger and bowing courteously began conversation at once.

"Mr. Barnes, the famous detective," said he.

"My name is Barnes," replied the detective, "I have the pleasure of knowing you?"

"I sincerely hope so," continued the stranger. "The fact is I suppose forgotten it."

"Forgotten your name?" Mr. Barnes asked an interesting case and doubly attentive.

"Yes," said the visitor. "The case is my singular predicament to have lost my identity. The object of my call. I wish you to remember who I am. # THE NAMELESS MAN.

By RODRIGUES OTTOLENGUI.

Mr. Barnes was sitting in his private room, with nothing of special impor-

"Forgotten your name?" Mr. Barnes seemed an interesting case and became doubtfully attentive.
"Yes," said the visitor. "That is precisely my singular predicament. I seem to have lost my identity. That is the object of my call. I wish you to discover who I am. As I am evidently a full grown man, I can certainly claim that I my point of view, I mean. To you, of course, it must seem unfortunate. Yet it is not unparalleled. There have been many such cases recorded, and for your temporary relief I may say that sooner or later complete restoration of memory unravel your mystery as soon as possible, that you may suffer as little incon-

"The clerk at the Waldorf hotel,

"It tends to show that you have been still find out whether you live here or not. How did you register at the hotel?"

"M. J. G. Remington, city."
"You are sure that Remington is not your name?"
"Quite sure. After breakfast this morning I was passing through the lobby when the clerk called me twice by that name. Finally one of the hall boys touched me on the shoulder and explained that I was wanted at the desk.
I was very much confused to find myself called 'Mr. Remington,' a name which certainly is not my own. Before I fully realized my position I said to the clerk, 'Why do you call me Remington?' and he replied, 'Because you registered under that name.' I tried to look it off, but I am sure that the clerk looked upon me as a suspicious character."
"What baggage have you with you at the hotel?"
"None. Not even a satchel."
"May there not be something in your pockets that would help—letters, for example?"
"I am sorry to say that I have made a search in that direction, but found nothing. Luckily I did have a pocketbook though."
"Much money in it?"
"In the neighborhood of $500." Mr. Barnes turned to his table and made a few notes on a pad of paper.
While so engaged his visitor took out a fine gold watch, and after glancing at the face was about to return it to his pocket when Mr. Barnes wheeled around in his chair and said:
"That is a handsome watch you have there. Of a curious pattern, too. I am rather interested in old watches." The stranger seemed confused for an instant and quickly put up his watch, saying:
"There is nothing remarkable about it. Merely an old family relic. I value it more for that than anything else. But about my case, Mr. Barnes—how long do you think it will take to restore my identity to me? It is rather awkward to go about under a false name."
"I should think so," said the detective. "I will do my best for you, but you have given me absolutely no clew to work upon, so that it is impossible to say what my success will be. Still I think 48 hours should suffice. At least in that time I ought to make some discoveries for you. Suppose you call again on the day after tomorrow at noon precisely. Will that suit you?"
"Very well indeed. If you can tell me who I am at that time, I shall be more than convinced that you are a great detective, as I have been told." He arose and prepared to go, and upon the instant Mr. Barnes touched a button under his table with his foot, which caused a tiny bell to ring in a distant part of the building, no sound of which penetrated the private office. Thus any one could visit Mr. Barnes in his den and might leave unperceived the fact that a spy would be awaiting him out in the street who would shadow him persistently day and night until recalled by his chief. After giving the signal Mr. Barnes held his strange visitor in conversation a few moments longer to allow his spy opportunity to get to his post.
"How will you pass the time away, Mr. Remington?" said he. "We may as well call you by that name until I find your true one."
"Yes, I suppose so. As what I shall do during the next 48 hours, why, I think I may as well devote myself to seeing the sights. It is a remarkably pleasant day for a stroll, and I think I will visit your beautiful Central park."

"A capital idea. By all means I would advise occupation of that kind.
It would be best not to do any business until your memory is restored to you."
"Business? Why, of course I can do no business."
"No; if you were to order any goods, for example, under the name of Remington, later on, when you resume your proper identity, you might be arrested as an impostor."
"By George, I had not thought of that! My position is more serious than I had realized. I thank you for the warning. Sightseeing will assuredly be my safest plan for the next two days."
"I think so. Call at the time agreed upon and hope for the best. If I should need you before then, I will send to your hotel."
Then saying "Good morning," Mr.
Barnes turned to his desk again, and as the stranger looked at him before stepping out of the room the detective seemed engrossed with some papers before him. Yet scarcely had the door closed upon the retreating form of his recent visitor when Mr. Barnes looked up with an air of exultation.
A moment later a very tiny bell in a drawer of his desk rang, indicating that the man had left the building, the signal having been sent to him by one of his employees, whose business it was to watch all departures and notify his chief. A few moments later Mr. Barnes himself emerged, clad in an entirely different suit of clothing and with such alteration in the color of his hair and beard that more than a casual glance would have been required to recognize him.
When he reached the street, the stranger was nowhere in sight, but Mr.
Barnes went to a doorway opposite, and there he found written in blue pencil the word "up," whereupon he walked rapidly up town as far as the next corner, where once more he examined a doorpost, upon which he found the word "right," which indicated which way the man ahead of him had turned.
Beyond this he could expect no signals, for the spy shadowing the stranger did not know positively that his chief would take part in the game. The two signals which he had written on the doors were merely a part of a routine and intended to aid Mr. Barnes should he follow, but if he did so he would be expected to be in sight of the spy by the time the signal were reached. And so it proved in this instance, for as Mr. Barnes turned the corner to the right he easily discerned his man about two blocks ahead and presently was near enough to see Remington also.
The pursuit continued until Mr.
Barnes was surprised to see him enter the park, thus carrying into his intention as stated in his interview with the detective. Entering at the Fifth Avenue gate, he made his way toward the man-ageria, and here a curious incident occurred. The stranger had mingled with the crowd in the monkey house and was enjoying the antics of the mischievous little animals when Mr. Barnes, getting close behind him, deftly removed a pocket handkerchief from the tail of his coat and swiftly transferred it to his own.
On the day following, shortly before noon, Mr. Barnes was walking into the reading room of the Fifth Avenue hotel. In one corner there is a handsome mahogany cabinet, containing three compartments, each of which is enclosed by a glass door, and in the middle of the upper half. About these panels are draped yellow silk curtains, and in the center of each appears a white porcelain numeral. These compartments are used as public telephone stations, the applicant being shut in, so as to be free from the noise of the outer room.
Mr. Barnes spoke to the girl in charge and then passed into the compartment numbered 1. Less than five minutes later Mr. Leroy Mitchell came into the reading room. His keen eyes peered about him, scanning the countenances of those busy with the papers or writing, and then he gave the telephone girl a number and went into the compartment numbered 1. About ten minutes elapsed before Mr. Mitchell came out again, and having paid the toll he left the hotel. When Mr. Barnes emerged, there was an expression of extreme satisfaction upon his face, and without lingering he also went out. But instead of following Mr. Mitchell through the main lobby to Broadway he crossed the reading room and reached Twenty-third street through the side door. Thence he proceeded to the station of the elevated railroad and went up town. Twenty minutes later he was ringing the bell of Mr. Mitchell's residence. The buttons who answered his summons informed him that his master was not at home.
"He usually comes in at luncheon, however, does he not?" asked the detective.
"Yes, sir," responded the boy.
"Is Mrs. Mitchell at home?"
"No, sir."
"Miss Rose?"
"Yes, sir."
"Ah, then, I'll wait. Take my card to her."

Mr. Barnes passed into the luxurious drawing room and was soon joined by Rose, Mr. Mitchell's adopted daughter.
"I am sorry papa is not at home, Mr.
Barnes," said the little lady, "but he will surely be in to luncheon if you will wait."
"Yes, thank you, I think I will. It is quite a trip up, and, being here, I may as well stop awhile and see your father, though the matter is not of any great importance."
"Some interesting case, Mr. Barnes? If so, do tell me about it. You know I am almost as much interested in your cases as papa is."
"Yes, I know you are, and my vanity is flattered. But I am sorry to say I have nothing on hand at present worth relating. My errand is a very simple one. Your father was saying a few days ago that he was thinking of buying a bicycle, and yesterday by accident I came across a machine of an entirely new make, which seems to me superior to anything yet produced. I thought he might be interested to see it before deciding what kind to buy."
"I am afraid you are too late, Mr.
Barnes. Papa has bought a bicycle already."
"Indeed! What style did he choose?"
"I really do not know, but it is down in the lower hall, if you care to look at it."
"It is hardly worth while, Miss Rose.
After all, I have no interest in the new model, and if your father had found something that he liked I won't even mention the other to him. It might only make him regret his bargain. Still, on second thought, I will go down with you, if you will take me into the dining room and show me the head of the moose which your father has been bragging about killing. I believe it has come back from the taxidermist?"
"Oh, yes. He is just a monster. Come on."
They went down to the dining room, and Mr. Barnes expressed great admiration about the moose's head and found Mr. Mitchell's skill as a marksman.
But he had taken a moment to scrutinize the bicycle, which stood in the hallway, while Rose was opening the blinds in the dining room. Then they returned to the drawing room, and after a little more conversation Mr. Barnes departed, saying that he could not wait any longer, but he charged Rose to tell her father that he particularly desired him to call at noon on the following day.
Promptly at the time appointed Remington walked into the office of Mr.
Barnes and was announced. The detective was in his private room, and Mr.
Leroy Mitchell had been admitted but a few moments before.
"Ask Mr. Remington in," said Mr.
Barnes to his boy, and when that gentleman entered, before he could show surprise to find a third party present, the detective said:
"Mr. Mitchell, this is the gentleman whom I wished you to meet. Permit me to introduce to you Mr. Mortimer J. Goldie, better known to the sporting fraternity as G. J. Mortimer, the champion short distance bicycle rider, who recently rode a mile in the phenomenal time of 1:56 on a quarter mile track." As Mr. Barnes spoke he gazed from one to the other of his companions with a half quizzical and wholly pleased expression on his face. Mr. Mitchell appeared much interested, but the newcomer was evidently very much astonished. He looked blankly at Mr. Barnes a moment, then dropped into a chair, with the query, "How in the name of conscience did you find that out?"
"That much was not very difficult," replied the detective. "I can tell you more—indeed, I can supply your whole past history, provided your memory has been sufficiently restored for you to recognize my facts as true." Mr. Barnes looked at Mr. Mitchell and winked one eye in a most suggestive manner, at which that gentleman burst into hearty laughter. Finally saying:
"We may as well admit that we are beaten, Goldie. Mr. Barnes has been too much for us."
"But I want to know how he has done it," persisted Mr. Goldie.
"I have no doubt that Mr. Barnes will gratify you. Indeed, I am as curious as you are to know by what means he has arrived at his quick solution of the problem which we set him."
"I will enlighten you as to detective methods with pleasure," Mr. Barnes said. "Let me begin with the visit made to me by this gentleman two days ago.
At the very outset his statement aroused my suspicion, though I did my best not to let him think so. He announced to me that he had lost his identity, and I promptly told him that his case was not uncommon. I said that in order that he might feel assured that I did not doubt his tale. But truly his case, if he were telling the truth, was absolutely unique. Men have lost recollection of their past and even forgotten their names, but I have never before heard of a man who had forgotten his name and at the same time knew that he had done so."
"A capital point, Mr. Barnes," said Mr. Mitchell. "You were certainly shrewd to suspect fraud so early."
"Well, I cannot say that I suspected fraud so soon, but the story was so unlikely that I could not believe it immediately. I therefore was what I might call analytically attentive during the rest of the interview. The next point worth noting which came out was that, although he had forgotten himself, he had not forgotten New York, for he admitted having come to me without special guidance."
"I remember that," interrupted Mr.
Goldie, "and I think I even said to you at the time that it was significant."
To be continued.

Everyone knows in a general way that the Grand Trunk is this winter doing an enormous business, but few people outside of railway circles have any idea of its real volume. Thursday and Friday, December 9 and 10, on that first two districts, which comprise the line from Montreal to Portland, no less than 350 trains moved, an average of 175 a day.
This means that a train was started from some point on this section of road, 297 miles in length, every eight minutes during the two days.
The horse and arrow are the designs most commonly used in weather vanes.
It is generally conceded that finely

DIVISION FENCES.
Cheaply Made and Effectively Used in Ohio
For Dividing Pastures.
Waldo F. Brown, one of Ohio's progressive farmers, believes that it adds greatly to the value of a pasture to divide it into three parts. By this plan he changes the cows each week, so that they will go on a fresh pasture each Monday, and each lot will have two weeks to grow for one week to be grazed. It is made to appear that these division fences can be made very cheaply. Following is an illustrated description, originally submitted by Mr. Brown to Country Gentleman:
We make division fences with fine plain wires—one a ribbon wire to show, so that they will not run into it, and with posts 60 feet apart. We stretch these wires perfectly tight with a ratchet made to be used with a common monkey wrench, and then staple a light tailing—1½ inches thick and 8 inches wide—every 10 feet. This keeps the cows from spreading the wires apart and crawling through. These ratchets cost but 10 cents each and give perfect control of the wires, as with a wrench you can at any time take up the slack in a wire, and on level land a wire from 50 to 80 rods long can be stretched.
In making this fence the end posts must be set deep and thoroughly braced, and then the staples used on the posts

DIVISION FENCE FOR PASTURE. must not be driven so as to hold the wire close, but left so that they will play back and forth, but on the pallings the staples must be driven tight. The best plan of bracing the end posts which I have ever found is an iron rear brace, as shown in the engraving. Br is the brace, B B the bolts, M S the mudsill, to which the lower end of the brace is bolted. The upper end is bolted to the post P. We make the braces of old wagon tires and use half inch bolts. W W are the wires. The advantage of rear bracing is that the strain of the wires pulls the post down instead of lifting it up, as is the case with a prop front brace.

Why Bees Do Not Swarm.
There are various reasons why bees do not swarm. Here are some of the reasons specified by Kansas Farmer: In the first place, it is well known that the common or black bees do not increase to such an extent under the same conditions as do the Italian bees.
The honey season has also much to do with it. During a scarcity of honey, bees will not increase so rapidly as if the honey flow was heavy. Also the size of the hive has much to do with the control of swarming. If abundance of room is given black bees for storage, they will swarm at all, even in the best of honey seasons. Plenty of storage room has much to do in controlling the swarming of Italian bees, but they are more liable to swarm than black. It is very important to have beehives just the right size, even if they are made old box fashion. A very large hive will never produce good results any way you take it. Hives should be made sectional, and if at any time more room is needed add another section. The required size, as given in our standard works, is about 2,000 cubic inches.

The Plank Drag.
An Indiana farmer assures Rural New Yorker that he finds a good plank drag indispensable in preparing lands for any crop. He has a homemade affair

INDIANA PLANK DRAG. which he prizes. Here is what he says about it: It is made of 2 inch plank and is 3 by 6 feet in size. At the front end narrow teeth are set in, sloping back, so that they will not catch and hold trash. These teeth elevate the front end of the drag and help to break up the large clods and stir the soil.

EASTERN ARGUS.
1803-1898.
DAILY AND WEEKLY.
For nearly a century and from the time of Thomas Jefferson the Eastern Argus has maintained its position as the leading Democratic paper of Maine and the unsparing exponent of Jeffersonian principles. To-day "the old Argus" is a familiar phrase throughout Maine which expresses the popular recognition and appreciation of its standing.
Old in years the Argus has improved with age and is more vigorous to-day than it ever was.
In all the departments of a modern newspaper the Eastern Argus is fully up to the times and keeps its place in the front rank. Its general news service is unequalled; its local and State news service covers thoroughly the First District and the entire State; its market and ship news reports are unequalled in Maine.
The coming year promises to be one of great importance in political and general affairs, and the Argus will keep its readers in closest touch with the national life on all sides, than ever before. Its columns will be enlivened with special correspondence and the many attractive features that have helped to establish and extend its reputation. Its chief aim will be to give all the News. The mechanical facilities of the Argus Office for producing a first-class paper were never so perfect as they are today, and embrace the latest improvements, including a complete outfit for artistic illustrative work by the Argus' own artist. In short, no pains or expense will be spared the coming year to maintain the standing of the Argus in the front rank of New England newspapers.

WEEKLY ARGUS.
The Weekly Argus will keep up its old-time reputation as a family newspaper, covering the news of the State and giving careful attention to its markets and ship news reports. Subscribers to the Weekly Argus are entitled to the Saturday edition of the Daily Argus. This practically makes the Weekly a Semi-Weekly and gives the subscribers a large volume of news for a small amount of money.

TERMS.
The Daily Argus is sent for 50 cents per month or $6.00 per year in advance, and $7.00 at the end of the year, free of postage.
The Weekly Argus, INCLUDING THE SAT-URDAY EDITION, is sent at these rates:—One copy, one year, free of postage, $1.50 in advance or $16.00 at the end of the year. Clubs of 10, free of postage, $10.00 in advance.

This Tuesday evening there is quite a delegation of Rebekahs anticipating a pleasant visit to Lewiston in response to an invitation from the Lewiston lodges.
"It is not all gold that glitters," neither is it all pleasure which we anticipate. Wife and I went to the city to spend Christmas, took cold, sat around the house, making frequent excursions to my nose accompanied by a handkerchief, dismantling chair backs of tidies, gunny bags, etc.
We sometimes find companion pieces in newspapers, which we cut out and place side by side in our scrap book. Though they may be as opposite as the antipodes yet they are companions just the same. We have in mind two that lately appeared in the ADVERTISER entitled "We Need a Change," and "The Buster," Selah.
Friday evening at the Methodist church, Christmas services were held. The house was beautifully decorated with evergreen, mistletoe, etc. Recitations by the children, also by "John," music and singing. Old Santa was there notwithstanding the disposition of some to place him under the ban. Two large trees well laden with presents for the multitude. All were invited regardless of race, color or former condition of servitude, and the response was quite generally. The Baptists held services, Sunday evening, to a crowded house partaking more particularly of the nature of a concert, recitations by the children, music, etc.

Trading is still brisk. One man swapped a sleigh for a stove that he might keep warm if he couldn't go sleighing.
The ladies' club met with Mrs. E. Flint with a goodly number in attendance, considering the rather unsettled traveling. The topic now under discussion is "Our Country." Just now the reading is Washington's Farewell Address to the Army.

A CHRISTMAS GATHERING.
On Dec. 25th there gathered at Simon Grover's, East Stoneham, a pleasant company to the number of twenty-seven, including their eight boys. The youngest is seven years old. He was the orator of the day as he recited a number of pieces in a cute way peculiarly his own. Those from out of town were Abel Andrews, wife and son, Mrs. O. Saunders and son Carlton, Mrs. G. E. Grover and son. The dinner that was so much enjoyed by all, was beautiful and beautiful and a complete success. The good things that radiated from the monster chicken pie would occupy too much space to enumerate. The only detractor from the enjoyment was the absence of the two daughters, who with their families were unable to be present.

REMNANTS.

Yes, just at present we are taking stock, So to-day have not much time to talk; But on the centre counter you'll find, In lengths and prices to your mind, Remnants of everything, narrow and wide; The best goods and cheapest—side by side. As fast as we find them there they'll lay So you can look them over day by day, For every one as it comes to hand Will be decorated with a band And join the lot, right there to stay, Till some needy one carries it away. The price of cloaks is too small to mention But may reward your close attention. Come one, come all, we're here to stay And glad to see you every day.
